

YOUTH ASSEMBLY FOR HUMAN RIGHTS

We Support the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education

Terrorism and war also provide an opportunity to discuss issues of prejudice, religious intolerance and discrimination. But as some experts point out, “it is easy to look for and assign blame, in part to make a situation understandable and feel it was preventable”. It is often said that children are the future of a country. If so, then we are seriously compromising our future, as we allow the unabated violence to go on in our communities, our streets, our mosques and now our schools.

